

Natural Modeling of Macromolecular Systems

Peter Minary

*Department of Computer Science
University of Oxford*

ABSTRACT

The high dimensionality involved when exploring the conformational space of large macromolecules severely limits our ability to accurately model them at the nanometer scale. In this talk we present algorithmic approaches that address these limitations and open up new application areas for experimental refinement, RNA structure modeling and computational epigenetics.